Business Tax Compliance
Get it right and keep it right

Your situation
The tax function at your company has to respond to constant changes. Legal requirements as well as the requirements of your senior leadership or markets and investors are typical drivers of such changes. Your company’s accounting and payroll function are being impacted by a number of factors:

- Globalization of companies
- Changing in tax law
- Strict handling of deadlines for submitting tax filings
- Comprehensive risk management
- Complexity of transactions and departments

Local and global organizations must strike a balance by achieving the right control through risk mitigation, visibility and consistent quality, and the right efficiency across processes and systems, while creating the right value for the business at lower cost. Companies that get it right and keep it right are positioned to see their investments in their tax function become truly beneficial.

Companies across industries are engaged transformation initiatives, marked by expansion into emerging markets, the deployment of Shared Services Centers. The continuous drive for efficiency and lower costs forces you to focus on your key business processes. The preparation and filing tax declarations can simply not become a priority on your agenda. This implies certain risks such as late filing of notification procedure for dividend payments related to withholding tax.
